SUMMARY

Act 1 Scene 1

- The play opens with Inspector Bertezzo and a police constable questioning a man called ‘maniac’ in the police headquarters.
- The play opens in a politically disturbed environment because of the death of an anarchist who fell from the police headquarters.
- The maniac can be described as a mysterious, but dangerously unstable man with a talent for impersonations.
- Reading through the documents, Bertezzo remarks how the maniac has been arrested 11 times for impersonating professionals like surgeons, bishops, psychiatrists and even as a lecturer of the University of Padova.
- The maniac acts playfully and shows his expertise in all professions.
- The maniac then teases the inspector, and when the inspector threatens to arrest him, he says that he is clinically diagnosed as mad, and so the police would be punished by legal code. He even says he studied law for 20 years when he was in a mental asylum.
- One profession he had never impersonated was being a judge. We see him acting as a judge in the later scenes.
- When the inspector tells him to leave, he denies the offer and says he would jump out of the window (like the case of the Anarchist), if forced.
