Ott, 2015-12-01 This important study of episcopal office and clerical identity in a socially and culturally dynamic region of medieval Europe examines the construction and representation of episcopal power and authority in the archdiocese of Reims during the sometimes turbulent century between 1050 and 1150 Drawing on a wide range of diplomatic hagiographical epistolary and other narrative sources John S Ott considers how bishops conceived of and projected their authority collectively and individually In examining episcopal professional identities and notions of office he explores how prelates used textual production and their physical landscapes to craft historical narratives and consolidate local and regional memories around ideals that established themselves as not only religious authorities but also cultural arbiters This study reveals that far from being reactive and hostile to cultural and religious change bishops regularly grappled with and sought to affect positively and to their advantage new and emerging cultural and religious norms

Horizontal Learning in the High Middle Ages Micol Long, Tjamke Snijders, Steven Vanderputten, 2025-10-01 The history of medieval learning has traditionally been studied as a vertical transmission of knowledge from a master to one or several disciples Horizontal Learning in the High Middle Ages Peer to Peer Knowledge Transfer in Religious Communities centres on the ways in which cohabiting peers learned and taught one another in a dialectical process how they acquired knowledge and skills but also how they developed concepts beliefs and adapted their behaviour to suit the group everything that could mold a person into an efficient member of the community This process of horizontal learning emerges as an important aspect of the medieval learning experience Progressing beyond the view that high medieval religious communities were closed homogeneous and fairly stable social groups the essays in this volume understand communities as the product of a continuous process of education and integration of new members The authors explore how group members learned from one another and what this teaches us about learning within the context of a high medieval community
