Policy: Accounting is responsible for the timely preparation and distribution of invoices to optimize cash flow and customer payments. Accounting will also maintain accurate records over Accounts Receivable and abide by proper internal controls.

Purpose: To explain the methods for the preparation of invoices and accounts receivable records processing.

Scope: This procedure applies to all product sales and services provided by the company.

Procedure:

1.0 SALES ORDER ROUTING AND REVIEW

1.1 Shipping will immediately forward to Billing completed Sales Orders as per procedure REV105 SHIPMENT OF GOODS along with shipping documentation and the customer's Purchase Order. All Sales Orders will be routed on a daily basis to ensure prompt billing. Accounts Receivable will then prepare invoices to be mailed by the next business day.

1.2 The SALES ORDER should already contain all pertinent billing information as part of the company's REV104 SALES ORDER ACCEPTANCE procedure. However, as part of proper internal control, Billing will verify the information contained on the customer's purchase order or company order form with the sales order and completed shipping documentation.

As part of this review process, the propriety and accuracy of contact information, prices, credit terms, transportation charges, extensions, and footings will be determined.

2.0 INVOICE PREPARATION AND POSTING

2.1 The next sequentially numbered REV106-1 INVOICE will be prepared from the information from the Sales Order (see REV101-1 SALES ORDER) and will include the invoice date, date of shipment, description of items shipped with model numbers, quantity, selling price, and extended amounts and the customer's shipping and billing addresses.
