

Adaptive Filters

- The following is a block diagram of the adaptive filter:

- The adaptive filter has two input signals: the desired signal, $s(n)$, which is accompanied by a disturbance, $w(n)$, and a reference signal, $r(n)$, similar in characteristics to the disturbance.
- The FIR filter operates on the reference signal, and it adapts its impulse response such that its output resembles the disturbance accompanying the desired signal.
- Then, by subtracting the output of the filter from the desired signal plus disturbance, a good estimation of the desired signal is obtained ($e(n) = \hat{s}(n)$).
