Interrogating International Relations Jayashree Vivekanandan, 2012-03-12 The book interrogates the disciplinary biases and firewalls that inform mainstream international relations today and problematises the several tropes that have come to typify the strategic histories of post colonial societies such as India Questioning a range of long held cultural representations on India the book challenges such portrayals and underscores the centrality of context and contingency in any cultural explanation of state behaviour It argues for a historico cultural understanding of power and critiques IR s tendency to usher in a selective return of history Taking two contrasting case studies from medieval Indian history the book assesses the success and failure of the grand strategy pursued by the Mughal empire under Akbar The study emphasises his grand strategy of accommodation defined by the interplay of critical variables such as distance and the vast military labour market The book also looks at his conscious attempt to indigenise power by projecting himself as the personification of the ideal Hindu king This case study helps to contextualise the many critical transitions that occurred in international relations from medieval empires to the modern state system and from an indigenised experiential understanding of power to its absolute abstract manifestations in the colonial state “And I Too Am My Own Forerunner” Indrani

Disenchanted World Cheleen Ann-Catherine Mahar,2010-03-01 Colonia Hermosa now considered a suburb of Oaxaca began as a squatter settlement in the 1950s The original residents came in search of transformation from migrants to urban citizens struggling from rural poverty for the chance to be part of the global economy in Oaxaca Cheleen Ann Catherine Mahar charts the lives of a group of residents in Colonia Hermosa over a period of thirty years as Mexico became more closely tied into the structures of global capital and the residents of Colonia Hermosa struggled to survive Residents shape their discussions within a larger narrative and their talk is the language of the heroic individual so necessary to the ideology and the functioning of capital However this logic only tenuously connects to the actual material circumstances of their lives Mahar applies the theories of French sociologist Pierre Bourdieu to her data from Mexico in order to examine the class trajectories of migrant families over more than three decades Through this investigation Mahar adds an important intergenerational study to the existing body of literature on Oaxaca particularly concerning the factors that have reshaped the lives of urban working poor families and have created a working class fraction of globalized citizenship
