

Documentary Research Strategy to Research Canada

Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	1. Research aims Documentary Research aims to explore and understand the experiences of individuals and groups in a particular social context. This is achieved through the collection and analysis of documents, which are defined as any written or recorded material that provides information about a particular topic or issue. This can include a wide range of materials, from official records and government documents to personal letters and diaries. The aim of Documentary Research is to use these documents to gain a deeper understanding of the social and cultural context in which they were produced and to explore the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. 2. Research design Documentary Research is a qualitative research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. The design of a Documentary Research project will depend on the research aims and the types of documents available. It may involve a search for specific documents, or it may involve a more general search for documents that relate to a particular topic or issue. The design should also take into account the need to ensure that the documents are authentic and reliable, and that they are representative of the population of interest. 3. Data collection The data collection process in Documentary Research involves the identification and location of documents that are relevant to the research aims. This may involve a search of archives, libraries, and other sources. It may also involve the use of informants who can provide information about the location of documents. Once the documents have been located, they need to be accessed and copied. This may involve a visit to the source of the documents, or it may involve the use of a photocopying service. The data collection process should be documented, so that it can be repeated if necessary. 4. Data analysis The data analysis process in Documentary Research involves the interpretation of the documents and the identification of themes and patterns. This may involve a content analysis of the documents, or it may involve a more interpretive approach. The analysis should take into account the context in which the documents were produced, and the ways in which they have been used and interpreted over time. The analysis should also take into account the need to ensure that the findings are valid and reliable. 5. Research ethics Documentary Research is a research method that involves the collection and analysis of documents. It is important to ensure that the research is conducted in an ethical manner. This means that the researcher should obtain informed consent from the participants, and should ensure that the data is stored and handled securely. The researcher should also be aware of the potential for harm to the participants, and should take steps to minimize this risk.
Documentary Research: Ethnographic ethnography	6. Research findings The findings of a Documentary Research project will depend on the research aims and the types of documents available. They may include a description of the social and cultural context in which the documents were produced, and they may include an exploration of the ways in which the documents have been used and interpreted over time. The findings should be presented in a clear and concise manner, and should be supported by evidence from the documents.
