Connectivity Conservation Kevin R. Crooks, M. Sanjayan, 2006-11-02 One of the biggest threats to the survival of many plant and animal species is the destruction or fragmentation of their natural habitats The conservation of landscape connections where animals plants and ecological processes can move freely from one habitat to another is therefore an essential part of any new conservation or environmental protection plan In practice however maintaining creating and protecting connectivity in our increasingly dissected world is a daunting challenge This fascinating volume provides a synthesis on the current status and literature of connectivity conservation research and implementation It shows the challenges involved in applying existing knowledge to real world examples and highlights areas in need of further study Containing contributions from leading scientists and practitioners this topical and thought provoking volume will be essential reading for graduate students researchers and practitioners working in conservation biology and natural resource management

Land, Water and Development Malcolm Newson, 2008-09-17 Water is newsworthy there is or will be a world water crisis Aggravated by climate change we are approaching the limits of human exploitation of freshwater resources notably in growing essential food The complexities and uncertainties associated with improving our management of fresh water take the potential remedies out of the hands of simple local hard engineering and into much larger units the basin the ecosystem and the global context and also require longer term perspectives The Third Edition follows the same structure as its predecessors presenting the historical and scientific backgrounds to land water interactions and establishing the links with development processes and policies Throughout its two major messages are that our new philosophy should be one of humans in the ecosystem and that the guidance from science being uncertain and contested must be operationalized in a participatory system of governance based on participation Following a review of progress towards these elements in the developed world the international case studies update the situation in the developing world following the Millennium Development Goals our new emphasis on poverty and on global food supplies This book covers the multitude of scientific research findings development of tools and spatial temporal scale challenges which have emerged in the last decade Tensions are highlighted in the current and future role of large dams country studies are retained and considerably updated and development contexts are explored in greater depth as a dividing line in capacity to cope with land and water stress Technical issues have been expanded to cover major droughts environmental flows and the restoration of rivers and wetlands A separate chapter picks up these themes under terms of their relationship with uncertainty and the widespread perception that a new ethos of adaptive management is needed in the water sector For students of geography environmental science hydrology and development studies this innovative edition provides a reasoned academic basis of evidence for sustainable adaptive management of rivers and related large scale ecosystems using more than 600 new sources It will also prove invaluable for lecturers and practitioners
