Bardaglio, 2000-11-09 In Reconstructing the Household Peter Bardaglio examines the connections between race gender sexuality and the law in the nineteenth century South He focuses on miscegenation rape incest child custody and adoption laws to show how southerners struggled with the conflicts and stresses that surfaced within their own households and in the larger society during the Civil War era Based on literary as well as legal sources Bardaglio's analysis reveals how legal contests involving African Americans women children and the poor led to a rethinking of families sexuality and the social order Before the Civil War a distinctive variation of republicanism based primarily on hierarchy and dependence characterized southern domestic relations This organic ideal of the household and its power structure differed significantly from domestic law in the North which tended to emphasize individual rights and contractual obligations The defeat of the Confederacy emancipation and economic change transformed family law and the governance of sexuality in the South and allowed an unprecedented intrusion of the state into private life But Bardaglio argues that despite these profound social changes a preoccupation with traditional notions of gender and race continued to shape southern legal attitudes
