Iggy and the Kid! Martin Avery,2010-06-24 A Novel Celebration Of Canada The Winter Olympics 2010 And Hockey Hockey Hockey In Due Season Christine van der Mark,2016-05-28 First published in 1947 In Due Season broke new ground with its fictional representation of women and of Indigenous people Set during the dustbowl 1930s this tersely narrated prize winning novel follows Lina Ashley a determined solo female homesteader who takes her family from drought ridden southern Alberta to a new life in the Peace River region Here her daughter Poppy grows up in a community characterized by harmonious interactions between the local M tis and newly arrived European settlers Still there is tension between mother and daughter when Poppy becomes involved with a M tis lover This novel expands the patriarchal canon of Canadian prairie fiction by depicting the agency of a successful female settler and as noted by Dorothy Livesay was one of the first if not the first Canadian novel wherein the plight of the Native Indian and the M tis is honestly and painfully recorded The afterword by Carole Gerson and Janice Dowson provides substantial information about author Christine van der Mark and situates her under acknowledged book within the contexts of Canadian social literary and publishing history

Next-Year Country Jean Burnet,1951-12-15 In this study of the problems of social organization in a rural community of Alberta a drought afflicted wheat growing area centring round the town of Hanna is described as it appeared to the sociologist in 1946 Dr Burnet examines geographical and economic conditions in Hanna and shows how farming practices ways of living and modes of tenure brought into the area from more humid regions proved ill adapted to the dry belt and delayed economic adjustment In turn the difficulties in the realm of economics had adverse social and cultural consequences in both the households and the community as a whole The Hanna area was chosen for study though not altogether typical because it revealed more clearly than other areas not so severely hit by the drought of the 1930s the kind of disturbances within the Alberta social structure which made possible the rise of the Social Credit movement

Double-Takes David R. Jarraway,2013-05-25 Over the past forty years Canadian literature has found its way to the silver screen with increasing regularity Beginning with the adaptation of Margaret Laurence s A Jest of God to the Hollywood film Rachel Rachel in 1966 Canadian writing would appear to have found a doubly successful life for itself at the movies from the critically acclaimed Kamouraska and The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz in the 1970s through to the award winning Love and Human Remains and The English Patient in the 1990s With the more recent notoriety surrounding the Oscar nominated Away from Her and the screen appearances of The Stone Angel and Fugitive Pieces this seems like an appropriate time for a collection of essays to reflect on the intersection between literary publication in Canada and its various screen transformations This volume discusses and debates several double edged issues the extent to which the literary artefact extends its artfulness to the film artefact the degree to which literary communities stand to gain or lose in contact with film communities and perhaps most of all the measure by which a viable relation between fiction and film can be said to exist in Canada and where that double life precisely manifests itself if at all This book is published in English

Everyday Magic Laurie Ricou,2011-11-01 Child language is a subject in which everyone is an expert All parents study their children s language carefully if undeliberately and every family has its precious memories of the unique verbal improvisations of childhood For writers who continually struggle with and revel in the mysteries of language the language of children holds a special attraction Everyday Magic looks at the way Canadian writers have written through as distinct from for or about children at the ways they have used child language and children s models of perception to achieve various literary effects It describes how texts might be shaped by child usage and speculates that adult artists often find themselves surprised and informed by the child language they seek to create Ricou examines how the distinctive features of child language described by psycholinguists intersect with the written languages used by writers to suggest not only a child language but also the way a child sees and organizes an understanding of the world The book s subtitle putting the term child language into the plural points out that not one but many written interpretations of the child s perspectives are possible In order to emphasize this plurality and indicate that there are any number of child languages the author has organized his study as a series of closely related essays Each chapter considers the work of a Canadian author or authors with the book as a whole moving from the more conventional writers to those who step outside the bounds of convention Ricou proposes analogies with Wordsworth and Dylan Thomas Proust and Dickens but he finds his principal subject in the inherent interest of for example the Piagetian scheme that W O Mitchell seems to adopt in Who Has Seen the Wind the obsessions with similes in Ernest Buckler the variations on the Bildungsroman in Margaret Laurence and Alice Munro and the persistent experiments with presymbolic language in Bill Bissett For these and other writers such as Clark Blaise Emily Carr Dennis Lee Dorothy Livesay P K Page James Reaney and Miriam Waddington Ricou illuminates the particular literary languages appropriate to each author's subject The result is a fascinating and unique approach to Canadian literature

Writing in Dust Jenny Kerber, 2011-03-17 Writing in Dust is the first sustained study of prairie Canadian literature from an ecocritical perspective Drawing on recent scholarship in environmental theory and criticism Jenny Kerber considers the ways in which prairie writers have negotiated processes of ecological and cultural change in the region from the early twentieth century to the present The book begins by proposing that current environmental problems in the prairie region can be understood by examining the longstanding tendency to describe its diverse terrain in dualistic terms either as an idyllic natural space or as an irredeemable wasteland It inquires into the sources of stories that naturalize ecological prosperity and hardship and investigates how such narratives have been deployed from the period of colonial settlement to the present It then considers the ways in which works by both canonical and more recent writers ranging from Robert Stead W O Mitchell and Margaret Laurence to Tim Lilburn Louise Halfe and Thomas King consistently challenge these dualistic landscape myths proposing alternatives for the development of more ecologically just and sustainable relationships among people and between humans and their physical environments Writing in Dust asserts that reading environmentally can help us to better understand a host of issues facing prairie inhabitants today including the environmental impacts of industrial agriculture resource extraction climate change shifting urban rural demographics the significance of Indigenous understandings of human nature relationships and the complex often contradictory meanings of eco cultural metaphors of alien invasiveness hybridity and wildness
