Planning Phase related to Nature, Extent and Timing (RMM - worst areas)

When do we do Analytical Procedures?

- Analytical procedures are required during two phases of the audit:
 - *During the planning phase to assist the auditor in determining the nature, extent, and timing of work to be performed AND
 - *During the completion phase, as a final review for material misstatements or financial problems.
- Analytical procedures are not specifically required but are often done during the testing phase of the audit as part of the auditor's further audit procedures
 - *more detailed analytical procedures could act as substantive audit evidence
