

A Midsummer Night's Dream

AMND is a play written and composed beautifully by William Shakespeare. It is a comedy in itself. In this play, we see the simultaneous movement of two worlds. One world is the world where Hermia and Lysander come from and the other is the world of the fairies and the elves, which reside in the jungle. The confusion starts when characters from one world come into the other and confusion starts. This play is a hilarious roller coaster. The plot is the love story of Hermia and Lysander and Helena and Demetrius. The subplot is the story of the supernatural beings that reside in the forest. Shakespeare is moving two plots at the same time.

Strife and dissension engage our attention from the very beginning of the play and continue to hold our attention till almost the end. The same theme appears even in the Pyramis-Thisby episode. The strife and dissension begin the opening scene of the play and end just before the close of the last act where harmony in both the world of fairies and humans is fully established. Much of the interest of the play as a whole proceeds from the way this theme is developed. Strife and dissension give rise to several dramatic situations that arouse a feeling of suspense in our minds regarding the ultimate outcome. Theseus and Hippolyta are at war with each other for ages. After some time, harmony is established between them and they are marrying each other. There is strife and dissension present. Egeus and Hermia have dissension. Egeus wants Hermia to marry Demetrius but she refuses. This creates a clash in their relationship. There is
