

American Literary History:

Native American Period: 20,000 BC-Present

Characteristics: The literature is as diverse as the cultures that created it, but there are often common elements such as stories explaining creation or natural forces.
The narratives, myths, legends, songs and narratives were passed down in an oral tradition.

Exploration Period: 1492-1607

Characteristics: The literature is composed of European writings that describe the explorers' travels and impressions of the continent and its Native people.
The literature of this period comes to us in the form of letters and journals written by explorers as well as Native American tribal leaders.

Colonial Period: 1607-1765

Characteristics: The Colonial period was dominated by Puritan beliefs and thus literature of this period is usually historical, religious, or didactic. The first slave narratives were written at this time. Imaginative literature was rare; in some colonies, it was banned for being immoral.
The literature of this period comes to us in the forms of tracts, polemics, journals, narratives, sermons, and some poetry.

Revolutionary Period: 1765-1790

Characteristics: The Revolutionary period usually refers to writings that are politically motivated, either in support of British rule, in support of American patriotism and independence, or relating to the Constitution.
The writing at this time is dominated by political documents, speeches, and letters.

1750-1800 is also known as the Period of Enlightenment because there is a lack of emphasis and dependence on the Bible and more use of common sense (logic) and science. There was not a divorce from the Bible but an adding to or expanding of the truths found there.
