Captive Heart Linda Chaikin,1998 "Here a Captive Heart Busted" Howard W. Fulweiler,1993 Seeming to stand as a wall between the nineteenth and twentieth centuries sentimentality is almost a defining characteristic of the greatest literary figures of the former But reflection reveals that sentimentality is perhaps the most common of all literary modes of the twentieth century as well disguised in the latter case by an intense obsession with sexuality This book attempts to understand sentimentality as an important event in the developing history of Western consciousness the state of which still parallels the condition of Mark Twain s Jim in Huckberry Finn imprisoned in a flimsy slave cabin of false sentiment Here a captive heart busted The author traces this sentimental journey of modern literature by focusing on six major writers Tennyson and Dickens as the giants of Victorian domestic sentimentality Hopkins and Hardy as transitional figures in whom the sentimental tropes of the nineteenth century are moving toward the sexual sentimentality of the twentieth Lawrence and Eliot as representatives in different ways of the sexual sentimentality of the twentieth century The hypothesis of the book is that the general consciousness of Western society has undergone severe shocks as a result of the loss and sometimes repression of an older human awareness of what anthropologists have called participation a term which may be defined as a non sensory link between human beings and nature This loss of participation has become gradually apparent with the erosion of its visible emblems the Church with its supporting intellectual bulwark of the divine origin and purposes of Natural Law the extended family as visualized in feudal hierarchical theories of society and finally the nineteenth century ideal the nuclear family with its sacred location the Home and its glorified Proprietress the Woman The argument grows out of the work of philosophers like Ernst Cassirer and Susanne Langer anthropologists like Mircea Eliade and Lucien Levy Bruhl historical philosophers like R G Collingwood Thomas Kuhn and Michel Foucault historically oriented literary critics like Erich Auerbach and finally the eclectic writing of Owen Barfield The book closes with a brief epilogue which focuses on Toni Morrison's Beloved a fascinating apotheosis of earlier sentimental themes The conflict between belonging and freedom and between head and heart continues in the twentieth century as it grew out of the nineteenth Finally the author calls for exchanging the literature of sentimentality for a literature of freedom truth and feeling a literature which may serve as an underground railroad for Western consciousness to begin its escape from the slavery of sentimentality to find a real knowledge of the heart

Love Rev. Dr. Evangeline Holloway, 2009-07-16 The Reincarnation of Love was inspired by real life experiences and my ideology about love and passion for someone you love The various love poems are meant for the institution of marriage They reveal that Christians can be sexy and expressive also The Reincarnation of Love has three prongs the inspiration the pain and the love It addresses the concepts of love infusion love transfusion a captive heart and having a love infection These concepts are brilliantly brought out in the various poems as well as the twisted plays of love versus new love Then there are times when the new love appears to be infected and then resurrects itself again as the guiding light Just when you think you have it all figured out love reincarnates itself again in the exotic sensual yet tasteful metaphoric forms brought out in Queen Crab Meat Coffee Shop Computer Story and the Attribute to Perfume The book also addresses the controversy of Women in the Pulpit and provides words of encouragement and enlightenment to help empower individuals to move forward in life Sit back and experience an emotional spiritual and challenging journey through the various phases of pain love romance and spirituality like never before Once you start reading this book you cannot put it down Captive Heart Vivian
