Eric Gershwin, M.E. Gershwin, Pier Luigi Meroni, 2011-10-13 Autoantibodies was published and presented in November 2006 at the International Congress of Autoimmunity in Sorrento a small town in Campania Italy The Congress also celebrated the 100th anniversary of the first routine test for autoantibodies An autoantibody is a type of antibody that is produced by the immune system and that fights one or more of a person's own proteins These autoantibodies cause autoimmune diseases such as lupus erythematosus The authors and editors of this book provide a critical review of autoantibodies and their primary functions They cite a number of major developments in the field of autoantibodies including the detection of autoantibodies in which a healthy person is a carrier the discovery that autoantibodies can be both pathogenic and protective in some cases and the development of a device that will help monitor and detect a specific autoantibody using a small amount of serum and proteomic arrays Aside from the pathogenic and protective autoantibodies the book also discusses irrelevant autoantibodies as these may be relevant for future research It also addresses the importance of the autoantibodies in a person s body Clinical physicians as well as scientists interested in the significance of autoantibodies in the human body will find this book relevant It will also be of interest to those who suffer from an autoimmune disease Includes an exhaustive list of autoantibodies not covered by other publications Short reviews can easily be checked for quick reference information Both basic and clinical aspects are covered
