Gaining The Dividends Of Longer Life Jarold A. Kieffer,2019-04-08 Not all older people are unfit for work Indeed most people over age 55 remain physically and mentally able to work and rather than suffer the pressures of inflation or the boredom of idleness many would prefer to stay productive longer Dr Kieffer says that their extensive experience and education qualify most of them to remain self reliant well past current retirement ages If they are enabled to do so it would delay and reduce the time when they are forced to be financially and in some cases physically dependent He argues that unless policy leaders in both the public and private sectors act quickly and imaginatively to gain the financial and social dividends that can accrue from longer life our country by default will find itself preoccupied over the next thirty years with unnecessarily high costs of supporting its longer living and rapidly increasing older population Dr Kieffer explains why current retirement policies are no longer economically and politically manageable and he suggests a cost effective strategy whereby public and private funds could be used to enable millions of older people to remain active in jobs that serve unmet community needs He also outlines a strategy for helping young workers build retirement income assets during their entire work lives so that the unintended burdens that have fallen on the Social Security pension and public assistance programs can be eased and made more manageable in the future Lastly he describes the roles that government agencies businesses educational institutions foundations and older people themselves can play in carrying out the jobs and retirement income strategies
