A man and a woman are sitting at a desk in an office. The man is on the left, looking at a computer monitor. The woman is on the right, looking at the camera. There is a computer monitor on the desk.

These authors have shown that the use of a single, standard, non-validated questionnaire to assess the prevalence of depression in a community sample is likely to produce a high prevalence rate. This is because the questionnaire used in the study was not validated for the purpose of assessing depression in a community sample. The authors suggest that the use of a validated questionnaire, such as the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI), would produce a more accurate prevalence rate.
