

BERNIER'S VOYAGE TO THE EAST INDIES.

THE desire of seeing the world having made me crossed into Palestine and Egypt, would not let me stop there : it put me upon a resolution to see the Red Sea from one end to the other. I went from Grand Cairo, after he had staid there about a year : and in two and thirty hours, going by caravan past, I arrived at Suez, where I embarked in a galley, which in seven or eight days carried me, always in sight of land, to the port of Cidda, which is half a day's journey from Mecca. There I was disappointed contrary to my hopes, and the promise which the Deig of the Red Sea had made me, to go to where on that pretended holy land of Mahomet, where a Christian, that is not a slave, dares not set his foot. I staid there four and thirty days, and then I embarked in a small vessel, which in fifteen days carried me along the coast of Arabia, the Happy, to Mocha, near the strait of Bab-el Mandeb. I resolved to pass thence to the side of Mascara and Adalia, to get as far as Gondar, the capital town of the country of Abissinia, or the kingdom of Ethiopia : but I received certain information, that since the Portuguese had been killed there by the natives of the Queen Mother, or expelled, together with the Jesuit missionaries, whom they had brought thither from Goa, the Roman Catholics were not welcome there, a poor captain having lost his head at Suez, for having attempted to enter into that kingdom : that indeed, by going under the name of a Greek or an Armenian, I did not run so great hazard, and that even the King himself, when he should know that I could do him service, would give me land to till by slaves, which I might buy if I had money : but that undoubtedly they would notwithstanding charge me as merry, as they had lately done a certain state who had passed there under the name of a Greek physician : and that they would never suffer me to come away again.
