Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance,1993 Science on American Television Marcel Chotkowski,2024-05-31 As television emerged as a major cultural and economic force many imagined that the medium would enhance civic education for topics like science And indeed television soon offered a breathtaking banquet of scientific images and ideas both factual and fictional Mr Wizard performed experiments with milk bottles Viewers watched live coverage of solar eclipses and atomic bomb blasts Television cameras followed astronauts to the moon Carl Sagan through the Cosmos and Jane Goodall into the jungle Via electrons and embryos blood testing and blasting caps fictional Frankensteins and chatty Nobel laureates television opened windows onto the world of science But what promised to be a wonderful way of presenting science to huge audiences turned out to be a disappointment argues historian Marcel Chotkowski LaFollette in Science on American Television LaFollette narrates the history of science on television from the 1940s to the turn of the twenty first century to demonstrate how disagreements between scientists and television executives inhibited the medium s potential to engage in meaningful science education In addition to examining the content of shows she also explores audience and advertiser responses the role of news in engaging the public in science and the making of scientific celebrities Lively and provocative Science on American Television establishes a new approach to grappling with the popularization of science in the television age when the medium s ubiquity and influence shaped how science was presented and the scientific community had increasingly less control over what appeared on the air

Channeling Violence James T. Hamilton, 2021-04-13 If it bleeds it leads The phrase captures television news directors famed preference for opening newscasts with the most violent stories they can find And what is true for news is often true for entertainment programming where violence is used as a product to attract both viewers and sponsors In this book James Hamilton presents the first major theoretical and empirical examination of the market for television violence Hamilton approaches television violence in the same way that other economists approach the problem of pollution that is as an example of market failure He argues that television violence like pollution generates negative externalities defined as costs borne by others than those involved in the production activity Broadcasters seeking to attract viewers may not fully bear the costs to society of their violent programming if those costs include such factors as increased levels of aggression and crime in society Hamilton goes on to say that the comparison to pollution remains relevant when considering how to deal with the problem Approaches devised to control violent programming such as restricting it to certain times and rating programs according to the violence they contain have parallels in zoning and education policies designed to protect the environment Hamilton examines in detail the microstructure of incentives that operate at every level of television broadcasting from programming and advertising to viewer behavior so that remedies can be devised to reduce violent programming without restricting broadcasters right to compete

Smokin' Rockets Patrick Lucanio, Gary Coville, 2002-06-25 Science and technology had a significant influence on American culture and thought in the years immediately following World War II The new wonders of science and the threat of the Soviet Union as a powerful new enemy made science fiction a popular genre in radio television and film Mutant creatures spawned by radioactive energy and intergalactic dictators unleashing horrific weapons upon Earth were characteristic of science fiction at the time and served as warnings to the very real dangers posed by the atomic age This work examines science and science fiction in American culture beginning in the year World War II ended and going to 1962 the year of John Glenn s orbital flight and the Cuban Missile Crisis The radio work of Arch Oboler and the significance of his Rocket from Manhattan which aired only one month after the dropping of the first atomic bomb and asked serious questions about the use of atomic energy are examined Other topics are the conflict between the free world and the Communist world in the context of science fiction plot lines the dangers of science as shown in films like Godzilla Them The Day the Earth Stood Still and radio and television programs the flying saucer phenomenon and the treatment of such stories in the media with special attention given to the 1956 documentary UFO the changing and more positive depictions of scientists television programs like Flash Gordon and Space Patrol the shift in the balance of world power due to the successful launching of Sputnik I by the Russians in 1957 the end of the world theme in science fiction and the American journey into space Beakman's Book of Dead Guys and Gals of Science Luann Colombo,1994 Alexander Graham Bell dead Madame Curie dead Galileo Galilei dead In this fun and fact filled book Beakman explains the accomplishments of 14 notable scientists from history Along with a timeline of each life including significant personal and professional dates the book tells readers how each inventor made his or her discovery The easy to read narrative also explains why the invention is important in an engaging style Actors and Activists David Schlossman,2017-09-25 This scholarly work looks at the issue of politics and performance in America today with particular attention paid to performances produced by activists the NEA Four and Miss Saigon
