

Merge sort

Merge sort is one of the most prominent divide-and-conquer sorting algorithms in the modern era. It can be used to sort the values in any traversable data structure such as a list.

Merge sort works by splitting the input list into two halves, repeating the process on those halves, and finally merging the two sorted halves together.

The algorithm first moves from top to bottom, dividing the list into smaller and smaller parts until only the separate elements remain. From there, it moves back up, ensuring that the merging lists are sorted.
