

Distance and Displacement

Reading Passage

Distance is the length of a path between two points.

When an object moves in a straight line, the distance is the length of the line connecting the object's starting and ending points. The SI unit for measuring distance is the meter (m). For very large distances, it is more common to make measurements in kilometers (km). For example, the Mississippi River is 3780 kilometers = 3,780,000 meters.

Displacement measures a trip from the starting and ending point. For example, you take a trip from your home in one direction to the store and come back home in another direction.

Your displacement would not be the total distance of the trip. It is the distance from your starting to ending point.
