

HEROES AND WARRIORS

Frederick I – Barbarossa or Rothbart – gained his popular name through his red hair and beard. He was the second German Emperor of the House of Hohenstaufen, crowned in 1152 on the death of his uncle Emperor Conrad III. Much of his considerable energy was spent in extending and confirming Imperial power in Italy, where he mounted six campaigns of ferocious devastation to bring rebellious Lombard cities under his control.

His bitter struggles against the Pope, the Guelf family, various Italian city states, the King of Poland and the powerful factions that sought to weaken Imperial power, made Barbarossa one of the most notorious Emperors of the Middle Ages.

In some regions of Europe, the figure of Barbarossa has taken on mythological significance. He is regarded as a legendary hero, not dead but sleeping (much as King Arthur is regarded in Britain) and waiting to reawaken at a time of great need. Barbarossa died while crusading in the Holy Land against Saladin, in an attempt to retake Jerusalem and restore it to Christian control.

This volume in the Heroes and Warriors series describes Barbarossa's courage, his majestic appearance, generalship and remarkable powers of learning and memory – a fascinating figure of the twelfth century who marked out the course of European history. Four specially commissioned colour plates, photographs, maps, line drawings and photographs illustrate his military campaigns and achievements.

The Heroes and Warriors series captures the romance and adventure of the past, by telling the authentic stories of the lives of famous champions and warlords.
