Contemporary Hematology Oncology:

Contemporary Hematology/Oncology Albert S. Gordon, 1981-09-30 Contemporary Hematology/Oncology Albert S. Gordon, Joseph LoBue, 1980 The continuous advances in our understanding of hematology and neoplastic disorders have made possible this third volume of reviews Their purpose is to summarize investigations which have defined new concepts and it is hoped stimulate new ideas In the choice of subjects we have attempted to retain the balance between academic and clinical interests We are grateful to the contributors who have maintained the high standards set in the earlier volumes and for feedback from readers Both have helped to orient the direction of this series It was a reader who pointed out that the title of the two earlier volumes The Year in Hematology was misleading since it suggested a detailed review of trends and findings limited to the last year In response to this valid comment The Year has been changed to Contemporary and the scope has been expanded to encompass the kindred disciplines of hematology and oncology Another editor Franco M Muggia has been added to provide additional expertise for the latter field The title of the present and future volumes has been changed to Contemporary Hematology Oncology It has been pointed out to us that considerable ingenuity will be needed to find topics not already covered We believe that the papers in the present volume have met this challenge As before the readers comments concerning Contemporary Hematology Oncology will be appreciated Joseph LoBue Albert S Gordon Robert Silber Franco M
