Introduction to Scientific Psychology Henry D. Jr.

Schlinger, Alan Poling, 2013-11-21 We humans are faced with an interesting problem That which we think we understand the most our own behavior we probably understand the least On the eve of a new millennium the planet is beset by a host of problems that are for the most part caused by human behavior Ironically although it seems that the greatest impact of our behavior is on the planet and its other inhabitants we may actually be threatening our own future the most For example we have caused untold harm to the air we breathe to the water we drink and by extension to much of the food we eat More important perhaps we have created a society in which among other things many people are anxious and depressed young women starve themselves and alcohol and cigarette use are responsible for hundreds of thousands of cases of illness and death every year And humans still murder one another at an astounding rate while at the same time continuing to affirm the value of human life At a time when it is critical that our children become educated more and more children are not learning the basic skills they will need to think logically so that they can begin to solve the world's problems The question may be not Can the planet survive but rather Can we humans survive and change our own destructive actions Although many scholars philosophers

The Scientific Practice of Professional Psychology Steven J. Trierweiler, George Stricker, 2013-11-21 A workable vision of scientific practice has proven to be an elusive if laudable goal for professional psychology The field cannot be faulted for failing to seek scientific wisdom but it has been slow to integrate that wisdom fully with the wisdom of practice This has proven to be a major oversight for despite psychology's long if the standing commitment to science practitioners are unlikely to think scientifically methods and products of science are described in ways that make it impossible to do so Unfortunately the rhetoric of science too often has done just that So focused has it been on the problem of distinguishing good science from bad that it has inadvertently defeated any hope of a practical science developing in our field We offer one remedy for this situation This book is about scientific thinking for the professional psychologist Specifically it is a primer on the application of scientific logic to professional practice We argue that the professional needs a more straightforward and realistic scientific identity than heretofore has been available The professional consciously must become a local clinical scientist bringing all the power of scientific thought to the specifics of the clinical situation Contrary to forces in psychology that promote uncritical acceptance of science as given by academic researchers or alternatively that encourage criticism and ultimate disregard of the scientific endeavor we call for a redoubling of efforts to incorporate scientific thought into practical professional inquiry

Self-determined Learning Theory Deirdre K. Mithaug, Martin Agran, James E. Martin, Michael L. Wehmeyer, 2002-12-18 This volume brings together four semi autonomous bodies of research choice self determination self regulation and self management to form a new theory of self engaged learning entitled Self Determined Learning Theory This theory explains why and how students self engage It identifies the factors that give students the sense of control over their learning that is needed for sustained adaptive and ultimately successful learning It begins by describing the characteristics of disengaged learners then describes and illustrates self determined learning theory within both normal and special populations It then examines the theory s predictive value across several special population contexts and then concludes with a critique of the theory s credibility and worth Divided into three sections theory construction theory verification and theory evaluation this volume is organized using the four steps of a previous book Learning to Theorize A Four Step Strategy Step 1 defines a problem of not understanding something as discrepancy between what is known and not known about a circumstance Step 2 searches for information and explanations to change the condition of not knowing into a condition of knowing Step 3 evaluates the credibility and worth of the explanation constructed in Step 2 Step 4 adjusts existing beliefs so they are consistent with the new theory Although aimed primarily at leaders in special education it should also appeal to researchers and scholars in psychology educational psychology and school psychology who are interested in the applications of self regulated learning theory in this case to special populations

Handbook of Gender, Culture, and Health Richard M. Eisler, Michel Hersen, 2012-10-02 This Handbook illustrates how gender ethnicity age and even sexual orientation and understanding influence the health practices and risk factors for health problems in diverse groups of people Contributions from leading researchers in psychology health and epidemiology provide an interdisciplinary approach to the topic In addition to epidemiological issues this book discusses the view that public health policy and programs must be individually tailored to specific groups to maximize their effectiveness Part I deals with the effects of stress on the health of diverse populations Part II of the book raises the issues of varied health risk factors and health practices for different cultural and socioeconomic groups Part III examines specific health problems and issues common to women and men of varying ethnicity The last section deals with the health problems of specific populations Featuring the latest information for understanding how diverse groups of people perceive and respond to issues relating to their health this Handbook should prove to be a valuable resource to a wide range of practitioners and researchers in psychology medicine psychiatry sociology social work nursing exercise science and counseling Psychological Assessment in Medical Settings Ronald H. Rozensky, Jerry J. Sweet, Steven M. Tavian, 2004-05-31 This volume the first to specifically address the function of psychologists as practitioners and scientists in medical settings presents a range of approaches to assessment and diagnostic practice rather than a litany of specific tools diseases or diagnostic problems The comprehensive discussion augmented by 41 case studies addresses the psychological assessment of patients and their families using traditional neuropsychological and psychological diagnostic tools in various topic areas and settings The application of assessment to issues such as ethics and law professional self assessment and credentialling and the communication of diagnostic findings is also discussed
