

Crime and Criminals

- Accurate measurement of crime is difficult to achieve:
 - Many crime victims do not report their victimization to their police
 - The UCR omits crime by corporations and thus diverts attention away from their harm
 - Police practices affect the UCR
 - If crime victims become more likely to report their crimes to the police the official crime rate will again change, even if the actual number of crimes has not changed
- To overcome this problem the federal government began the National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS)
