The Biology of Alcoholism Benjamin Kissin,2012-12-06 Pathogenesis is defined in Blackiston's Medical Dictionary as the course of development of disease including the sequence of processes or events from inception to the characteristic lesion or disease The central position of the word pathogenesis in the titles of Volumes 6 and 7 in itself connotes a bias on the part of the editors in favor of the disease concept of alcoholism inasmuch as the end product of the pathogenetic process is presumed to be a disease But the disease model as here conceptualized is vastly different from that of Jellinek or of Alcoholics Anonymous or of psychoanalysis In those theories alcoholism is seen as the inevitable consequence of some specific flaw in the heredity or the experience of the afflicted individual that inexorably leads to alcoholism In these present volumes the alcoholic syndrome is viewed rather as the outgrowth of the interaction of a variety of biological psychological and social influences which depending on the predominance of one or another may lead to different types of alcoholism This view which has been labeled the bio psycho social perspective encompasses a larger view of the dynamics of the development of alcoholism incorporating data from each of the phenomenologic levels involved An additional complication arises from the fact that the physiological and psychosocial stigmata of alcoholics which are probably most often the result of prolonged drinking frequently have come to be considered as causes of the disease
